Sheriff's Dept. will check for decals

Appomattox County Sheriff Gene Richardson says his deputies will hold checking details for expired auto stickers beginning April 1.

Each county resident owning a motor vehicle without a current county decal will be issued a summons for failure to purchase and/or display a sticker, according to Richardson.

Each county resident owning a motor vehicle with a current Virginia state license and valid Virginia state inspection must also have a current county decal affixed to the windshield of that vehicle by April 1, according to Richardson.

The operator or owner of any vehicle without a current county decal will be issued a summons for failure to purchase and/or display sticker.

Since this is a county ordinance, the Sheriff's Department is not allowed to give any extra time to any individual to obtain these decals.

Anyone wishing further information regarding the decal should contact the Sheriff's office.

Correction

In last week's issue of the Times-Virginian, a statement was incorrectly attributed to an elementary school teacher, Elizabeth Gillam, in the story about the recent school board meeting.

The statement, in reference to a discussion involving student discipline, was, "The teachers are not always backed up by the principals in their individual modes of discipline."

We apologize for this error.
